Glo Fiber, Shentel news release

Shentel to Expand its Glo Fiber High-Speed Fiber Optic Network to Carlisle, PA

Glo Fiber, powered by Shenandoah Telecommunications Company ("Shentel"), today announced its plans to construct a fiber network in Carlisle, PA and offer service in the fourth quarter of 2021. Launched in 2019, Glo Fiber delivers next-generation fiber-to-the-home (FTTH) multi-gigabit broadband internet access. The Glo Fiber network will offer high-speed data, streaming TV and digital phone service to over 7,000 homes and businesses in Carlisle. Based on a belief that everyone deserves better internet, Glo Fiber leverages Shentel's 7,000-mile regional fiber network to ensure high speeds, low latency, and fair pricing. In addition, Shentel prides itself on providing superior local customer service across all its markets including the growing list of Glo Fiber communities.

State and Local Governments Will Drive Broadband Deployment Success

States will be at the helm of the $42.5 billion in block grants designated in the historic $65 billion proposed for nationwide high-speed broadband within President Biden's infrastructure bill. The broadband-related funding of the bill itself shows the federal government recognizes broadband as essential as a utility, and acknowledges the importance of the role state and local governments will play in the success of its deployment, said Katheryn de Wit, project director of the Pew Charitable Trust's Broadband Access Initiative, Monday.

Comcast CFO warns of 'a little bit of a slowdown' at BofA Securities forum

Comcast remains the nation's largest pay-TV provider, but the company essentially ghosted that cord-cutting-bruised line of business in its participation Tuesday at the BofA Securities 2021 Media, Communications & Entertainment Conference. CFO Mike Cavanagh instead devoted his 44-minute video appearance to the non-withering branches of Comcast's corporate family tree, from broadband to wireless to theme parks to movies — except those, too, remain subject to a turbulent economic environment. "Covid has been a big disruption to the business," he said early on to interviewer Jessica Reif Ehrlich, Bank of America Securities media and cable analyst and managing director, before noting the pandemic's recent drag on Comcast's core cable operation in particular.

Pa. Republicans are set to subpoena documents and hire a contractor for their 2020 election review

Pennsylvania Republican lawmakers are set to vote Wednesday to subpoena Gov. Tom Wolf's administration for voter records, communication between state and county elections officials, and other documents as they investigate the 2020 presidential election 10 months after Joe Biden's victory. The vote comes as the Senate has been interviewing vendors to assist in the review, Senate President Pro Tempore Jake Corman (R., Centre) said in an interview Tuesday. "I hope to have someone under contract in the very near future," he said. Taken together, the developments underscore how the new taxpayer-funded partisan investigation has become a top priority for the GOP-controlled legislature.
